

GLBTQ Studies Course for Teachers

GLBTQ Online High School offers a one-semester GLBTQ Studies course specifically for teachers. The course is designed to educate about the historical and contemporary experiences of GLBTQ peoples and our current understanding of sexual identity and gender.

The next class starts January 9, 2012

Graduate Credit Available!

Participants have the option of earning 3 semester graduate school credits from the Hamline University Department of Education. The registration form is available from GLBTQ Online High School. The additional cost of this option is $384.

Built from our similar course for high school students, this course for teachers includes practical information on including GLBTQ people and issues in the curriculum and assessing your school environment.

GLBTQ Studies is an interdisciplinary study of the social, personal, cultural and political aspects of glbtq people. The course asks essential questions such as:

- ▽ Who are glbtq people?
- ▽ What is it like to have a non-heterosexual or gender non-conforming identity in today's world?
- ▽ What are the major events in history of glbtq peoples?
- ▽ Who are key figures & organizations in the history, support & activist efforts of glbtq peoples?
- ▽ What issues do glbtq people face today?
